This story happened in New Zealand in 2004. Lifeguard Rob Howes decided to swim in the ocean together with his family. At the beginning everything was all right. Then, suddenly, seven dolphins appeared and started to behave really weird. The dolphins surrounded Rob and his family. The lifeguard was a bit scared as the dolphins started to circle around the people slapping the water with their tails. Rob was looking around to find a way out but he got really surprised when he saw a huge shark that was trying to get to him and his family. The dolphins were protecting the people! After about forty minutes the shark finally gave up and swam away. The scientist say that dolphins are known for helping people and animals in danger.
